

ALPENGLOW PRODUCTIONS – PHOTO WORKSHOPS

Winter Wildlife Photography – Triple D Game Farm – Kalispell, MT

March 12 - 14, 2010

(March 15th – Inclement Weather/Optional Day)

Winter is the time to capture truly remarkable images that few other photographers can boast of or have experienced. If you missed out on our January workshop, don't despair – we're holding an encore session in March.

The animals will still be sporting their luxurious winter coats, and the angle of incident light will still be low enough to allow us to shoot virtually all day long with great results. A snow covered background will not only provide the contrast to make the animals pop out from their surroundings, but it also acts as a great light box to provide even subject illumination for uniform tonality rendering. Workshop size will be limited to 8 participants – to insure individual attention to the needs of each attendee.

Highlights

We will spend 3 days photographing a variety of animals (8 sessions) in unique wilderness settings and compounds specifically designed for photography sessions. We will start with a pizza party orientation session the evening before the workshop. Then, each morning beginning on January 23, we will travel short distances from the Game Farm to naturally designed settings to photograph the animals in their natural surroundings. After a morning shoot we will return to the main lodge for complimentary hot lunch then return to the field for an afternoon shoot. Mid-day breaks will allow for photo critiques and a chance to share information such as digital image editing and workflow, and other useful photo tips that will help improve your portfolio. A 4th day will be set aside in case of inclement weather or as an extra day for added optional sessions.

As you probably know, animals can be a difficult subject, so here is a chance to get acquainted with photographing wildlife in a controlled, but entirely natural setting. How about seeing the animal in a beautiful Rocky Mountain location with magnificent light? How about having the animal move around right in front of you with plenty of time to get 100's of shots? This is the Triple D Game Farm, the best place in North America to photograph native mammals in natural settings. You can expect to go home with many "keepers" that range from close-ups to wide-angle habitat images. The Triple D staff is truly amazing! You won't find a friendlier, more knowledgeable group of people, who have years of experience working with the animals. While your safety is of prime concern to the trainers, you will be closer to large cats, wolves, bear, etc. than you ever thought imaginable. All off-site wilderness compounds are fenced to help control the animals, but they are permitted to roam free and you will be right there with them inside the fence.

Triple D will guarantee at least 8 species of wildlife to be photographed. Wildlife models may include: grey and black wolves, bobcats, mountain lions, snow leopards, Canadian and Siberian Lynx, various species of fox, Siberian Tiger, grizzly and black bears and more.

The Leader

Rick Sheremeta is president of AlpenGlow Productions, Inc.. An avid outdoor and wildlife photographer, his work has been published widely - from calendars to international marketing campaigns and magazines.

Rick is a contract photographer for the Associated Press and he has authored numerous articles for

He believes it is important to have fun while learning - so be prepared to enjoy yourself and have a great time. Rick resides locally in the Flathead Valley, and is the Photographer in Residence at Triple D Game Farm.

Please contact Rick for further details and to answer any questions that you may have regarding clothing, photo gear, or special needs – your comfort and enjoyment is our primary concern.

Itinerary

- March 11th Evening: 6:00 PM Orientation meeting at the Triple D offices or TBA. Pizza and beverages will be served.
- March 12th – 14th: Morning and afternoon photography sessions with the wildlife models at various shooting locations; mid-day break will allow for instruction and free time.
- March 14th 4:00 - 6:00 PM: Wrap-up session and workshop comes to an end.
- March 15th: Weather Day - or it can be used for additionally purchased photography sessions.

What Is and Is Not Included?

The fee includes 3 days of photography instruction, and we have a “snow” day built in to our schedule. For an additional fee we can conduct additional photography sessions on the 4th day. Please contact me for details. The pizza dinner during orientation and hot lunches during the 3-day workshop are also included.

What to Bring?

Lots of energy, extra batteries and a lot of memory cards! Cold weather clothing – lots of layers with wool/synthetic under layers, wind/waterproof outer layers. A tripod can be used and is always recommended. You will not need long glass - a 70-200mm is more than enough for the majority of the photography. There are some places where a 400-500mm can be used or you can add a teleconverter. If you have a wide angle you will have some unusual opportunities to use it as well. Bring your flash to catch specular highlights and open up shadow areas.
